

City Harvest: Fast Facts

Our Roots Now serving New York City for more than 25 years, City Harvest is the world's first and the city's only food rescue organization. When it was founded in 1982, City Harvest was run entirely by volunteers who connected a handful of neighborhood restaurants to food programs serving meals to those in need.

Meeting the Need City Harvest is and always has been the New York City community's response to hunger. We link the food industry and countless organizations, foundations, corporations, and private citizens together to help feed their hungry neighbors.

More than 1.5 million New Yorkers currently live in poverty. City Harvest regularly delivers food to nearly 600 emergency food programs in New York City, helping provide food to over 260,000 men, women, and children each week.

Our Mission City Harvest works to end hunger across the five boroughs. We do this by rescuing and distributing excess food, educating lower-income people to encourage self-sufficiency, and forging innovative partnerships within communities to bring thousands of hungry New Yorkers their next meal.

The Simple Facts This year, City Harvest will rescue 28 million pounds of excess food from food establishments throughout the city and across the country.

- More than 90 staff members and 2,200 volunteers
- A fleet of 17 trucks and 3 bikes
- Food delivered nearly 24 hours a day, 7 days a week

Once rescued, food is delivered to soup kitchens, food pantries, homeless shelters, AIDS care providers, senior centers, and children's daycare centers that serve hungry New Yorkers in all five boroughs.
